PROFESSIONAL SUMMARY

I am a macroeconomist whose research focuses on macro-financial stability and the design of monetary policy frameworks in emerging and developing economies. I use structural models and empirical methods to analyze how the fiscal-monetary policy mix interacts with financial intermediation to influence business cycles, asset prices, and systemic risk. My objective is to contribute to the development of coherent policy frameworks that enhance financial resilience, strengthen fiscal-monetary coordination, and foster sustainable and inclusive growth.

TEACHING PHILOSOPHY

My teaching philosophy is grounded in clarity, rigor, and student engagement. I aim to make economic and financial concepts accessible without sacrificing analytical depth, emphasizing intuition alongside formal reasoning. In my courses, I connect theory to real-world policy issues and empirical evidence, encouraging students to think critically about how economic models inform decision-making in practice.

I prioritize an inclusive and supportive learning environment in which students with diverse backgrounds can develop confidence in quantitative and analytical skills. To this end, I use a combination of lectures, applied problem-solving, data-driven exercises, and discussion-based learning to reinforce key concepts. I also emphasize clear communication, ethical reasoning, and disciplined thinking as essential competencies for both academic and professional success.

Overall, my goal is to equip students with the tools needed to analyze complex economic and financial problems, evaluate policy trade-offs, and apply rigorous reasoning in graduate study, professional careers, and civic life.
